THE ANNUAL ADDRESS.

Governor Woods' Able Effort at the Pavilion on Thursday Night Last.

The GAZETTE was very much crowded for space last week by Fair matters and the exclusive report of Court proceedings which has been published. The pressure is not yet relieved, but it is deemed advisable to publish a large portion of Governor Woods' address to-day. This is done in recognition of the valuable ideas therein contained. Governor Woods said:

Mr. President and Fellow Citizens:

The mystery of human life is great, and greater still the mystery of God's purposes in man's development. The physical, the mental and the moral, the trinity of forces in human nature, are at perpetual war with each other, and yet, paradoxical as it would seem, their blending together in unity is necessary to a perfect manhood. The highest and best elements of our nature condemn selfishness; and yet it is an undeniable fact that selfishness is the chief promoter of human activities. The intelligent and moral upliftings pour their flood-light of beauty and grandeur along the pathway of life, tinging the mountain tops of our better natures with the beatific splendor of the upper world. The primal command "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread" was but the voicing of nature's law. Agriculture has in all ages been the one great source of individual and national strength. It is the natural method of subsistence. Hence, as a calling, it has ever been held in the highest esteem. In many instances it became so blended with, as to become a part of, the religion of ancient times. Unquestionably the religion of Egypt, the parent source from which sprang most of the mythologies of antiquity, was formulated from agriculture. Thus the tilling of the soil became in the very twilight of the ages, an honorable and a sacred calling; and the farmer, the ministrant of the gods. But the gods vanished, beat a retreat before the advancing light of civilization, and bore away with them the scepter and the crown of Ceres, and left nature's law the solitary but sufficient support of the husbandman. Stripped of the mythical glamour, and viewed practically, agriculture is the very life-blood of nationality, and will be until the end of time. The spoils of war and the treasures of commerce, may, for a while, inspire a people and make them great, but not for long. Some countries seem naturally adapted by soil and climate for the pursuits of husbandry, filled with fatness, responding with alacrity to the ploughman's touch, and laughing back with waving fields of golden grain, while others yield their substance with stubborn reluctance. And it is a curious fact that the Nations which have achieved the most lasting renown, are those who have had to contend against nature, and force its bounty by diligent and untiring effort—rainless countries where irrigation had to be invoked. Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Nevada belongs to the same category. Here the farmer's is no easy task. It is practically a rainless country, a "desert land," and nothing can be drawn from her bosom without intelligent and patient industry. Appearances are deceptive. The true value of a country, like the value of a man, can only be determined by experience. When I first traversed Nevada, I unhesitatingly pronounced it the most barren and worthless of all the States. I thought that the mining interests were all there was of value within its borders, and that the State would then be worthless and ultimately abandoned. Little did I think that the sagebrush lands, covering such a vast area within her borders, were productive, or ever could, in any way, be utilized. How deceptive! Now they are known to be among the most productive lands on the continent, none yielding more willingly nor more bountifully. Moisture alone is needed to give fertility, and great value to these lands. The moisture can be had by a thorough system of irrigation.

All that portion of the State lying contiguous to the mountain ranges, can be reclaimed by a system of canals at a comparatively small cost, conveying water from the mountain streams to the plains below, while the interior and more remote regions can be accommodated by a system of artesian wells.

I do not wish to be presumptuous towards those whose duty it is, or may hereafter be, to make laws, and conserve the general welfare, by offering unsought suggestions, but I am of the opinion that, in a State like Nevada, which, with its great possibilities, can only be made of practical value, by the expenditure of vast sums of money—more than more individual enterprise can command. Some system should be devised, by which the State should, at least, bear a part of the burden of reclamation.

The Carson, the Humboldt, the Truckee and the Walker Rivers, and other streams of lesser note, unquestionably can furnish water enough, and have a fall sufficient to irrigate an acreage vast enough, to say nothing of those regions which the artesian system can reach, to advance Nevada, at once, to the forefront of Agricultural States. The end to be attained, therefore, is of such supreme importance as to invite the attention, and command the active and efficient co-operation of every citizen.

The general disposition, in matters of this kind, is to seek to cast the burden upon the General Government, and ask Congress to make appropriate tions from the National Treasury for the expenses of the work. But the right of the Congress under the Constitution, to make appropriations, for the expenditure of the public money in matters other than of a national character is disputed. All merely local affairs are ordinarily left to the States, or to the people who are immediately interested. So that, in my judgment, any effort which might be made, looking to Congress for aid, would be futile, and only a waste of time. That, something should be done is apparent to all. It has become a public necessity. The State can rightfully do it. The State ought, in my opinion, to do it. The State, as I hope it will, receive the most serious consideration. I want to see the best done for the State that can be done, and the end desired accomplished by the shortest, cheapest, and best methods. Before I pass from the theme under discussion, permit me to urge upon every household within the State the supreme necessity of tree-planting.

It is a fact, well-known to science, and demonstrated by the experience of the world, that the planting of trees, generates moisture, increases the rainfall, and is the direct means by which climatic changes the most marvelous can be wrought. Denude a country of its forests and its climate will be changed, its moisture gone, its beauty swept away and its mountains and plains stand forth in all their monotonous aridity. Re-plant it with trees, and the gentle dews descend in sparkling beauty, and the rains come down to refresh the parched earth, and the grasses spring up, and the flowers bloom, and the trees grow, and the fields produce, and all nature smiles, and the very elements, with united voice, chant their glad anthems of rejoicing.

The plains of Sharon, the valley of the Jordan, and the hills of Judea were once the garden spot of earth. But the despoiling hand of war destroyed their canals and their ditches, laid waste their gardens and their vineyards, stripped their mountains and plains of their forests, and the early and the later rains ceased to fall, and desolation reigned supreme. Let the hand of modern science but touch that land with its wand, and it will spring forth again, as if by magic in renewed vigor, as a thing of beauty, surpassing in splendor the days of Judaic greatness. The late Khedive of Egypt, in recognition of this principle, offered a premium, in coin, for each tree planted and made to grow, within certain designated districts. A commendable rivalry was manifested by the people. Large forests sprang up. The results were most gratifying, and more than justified the undertaking. According to governmental reports, where, originally, the average yearly rain-fall was three days, it was increased to forty, and made the hitherto sterile plain a land of plenty. Let Nevada adopt the same policy, and she too will rejoice in a like triumph.

And, to the families who have homes,—be your homes ever so humble,—let me urge upon you the importance of planting ornamental trees, and shrubs, and flowers.

Nothing is so elevating, so refining, so delicate in their influences upon the sensitive mind and heart as flowers. They are the emblem—the expression of all that is lovely and pure and true in God's universe. Their good angel, bearing their sweet fragrance upon its wings, ever whispers peace and consolation and rest to the weary soul. There is such a kinship between beautiful flowers and people of refinement as, in my idea of the fitness of things, makes them inseparable. I never approach a home where flowers abound without feeling that some gentle, pure, refined spirit dwells therein—some heart that has been touched by the hand divine—some soul that aspires to the higher, the nobler, the better. Women of Nevada, cultivate flowers. They are the emblems of a higher life. Cherish them as things above all value. They will lighten your burdens and give rest to the weary soul. Amid the dazzling splendors of the nineteenth century and its marvelous triumphs in every department of human thought and human activity, I sometimes wonder if we fully appreciate the advancements that have been made in the appliances of agriculture during the last fifty years; in the invention of labor-saving machinery; in the new and improved methods of tilling the soil and garnering its products. Fifty years ago the old-fashioned plow with cast iron point and wooden mould-board, the sickle, the flail, and the wooden hand rake constituted the farmer's kit.

Now, how different. "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," the very heavens seemed cleft asunder by the hand of the Almighty and a new era dawned upon the world, and Genius, favored goddess of human destiny, saw her scepter over the minds of men. By her, agriculture was lifted up from the hardships and discouragements of slow and painful toil to a higher plane, when machinery was substituted for muscle and the farmer's task was simplified and made easy.

The speaker then entered into a comparison between ancient and modern systems of labor and education, showing that the increased demand for the necessities and luxuries of life had brought out our present system of education, urged to its utmost the genius of invention and made possible the wonderful progress of the last fifty years.

Agriculture and the mechanics arts should be taught in our schools, forcibly if necessary. The learning of trades should be enforced and the nobility of labor recognized in the training of the American youth. This would increase the percentage of native-born skilled laborers, which is now small, bring about better conditions of society, secure to the artisan more adequate reward and go far towards solving the labor question, an ever fruitful theme with demagogues. The value of labor depends upon its productive capacity, and under this evident fact all generous rivalry should be encouraged, and all education should aim at an increase of that practical capacity.

Mining is only an incident and to do it. And the State will do it if it is urged by the people. The State is already burdened with taxation, and in view of the sparseness of its population, the wisdom of undertaking to carry on such an enterprise, however valuable might, reasonably, be questioned. But, if, by adding to the burden, for a time, its population can be increased, thereby, adding to the revenues of the State its business energies quickened, and new and vast channels of commerce opened up, all good judgment would approve it.

The end to be attained would justify the means. As one looking to the best interests, and the future prosperity of the State, I would favor its undertaking jointly with the people to bear the burden. But this, like all other questions of public policy should never be the reliance of a people in the competitive race for commercial supremacy. Agriculture, arts, manufacturing, commerce—these, and such as these, are the corner stones, the foundation for permanent success. The beautiful river, the Truckee, which runs through this city, plunging from mountain height to the plain below, traversing the State, bearing with it verdure and fertility wherever it goes, has power enough to run the spindles and forges of the world. Woolen, and iron, and chemical manufactures, and the like, should be established at once on its banks, and the invaluable, but wasting power be utilized, and made remunerative. That such industries here are a public want, is unquestioned; and that they would prove highly remunerative, no one at all conversant with the facts can doubt.

I hope, and believe, that the time is not far distant when Reno, alone, will rival any manufacturing town on the Pacific coast. If the citizens are alive to their own interests; and the interests of the State, they will encourage such investments, by all rightful methods. That a new era is dawning upon Nevada can but be apparent to everyone.

The peroration was an eloquent exhortation to increase of effort and zeal for the national prosperity which now happily blesses the republic. After a feeling tribute to the immortal Garfield, and a condemnation of the communistic idea which alone threatens the stability of our government, the speaker said in closing:

Fellow citizens, your past triumphs are grand, your possibilities are great, your future is full of promise. May peace, prosperity and happiness attend you all.

A Sagebrush Fish Yarn.
An Eastern tourist in Nevada had been spinning some incredible fish yarns, when one of the party, turning to an old mountaineer, said:
"Bill, that gets away with fishing in this country, don't it?"
"Wal, I don't know about that."
"Do you mean to say that you have caught more and larger fish?"
"No; but I have caught some purty big tellers."

"Come, now, tell us the weight of the largest trout you ever caught."
"Wal, I can't exactly tell as to the weight, but you folks can figger on it. Now, yer know it is over two hundred miles around this yer lake. Put that down. As I said before, I don't know the weight of the biggest fish I ever yanked out, but I did haul one up on the beach, and after I landed him the lake fell three feet, and you can see by the water mark over yonder it hasn't riz since."

Blood, Breeding and Bottom.
A GAZETTE reporter had a talk with Theodore Winters at the Fair grounds on Friday.

Reporter—"It didn't make you very mad Winters, to see Collier beat Clara D." "No, I believe not. I think my way of running horses is correct after all. Turn 'em loose and see which lasts the longest. I've run Clara D. now for three years, and never beaten but once before. That was with Neapolitan at the Bay District track."

Reporter—"Jim Douglas seems to carry off the honors this year?" Winters—"Yes. I run Collier the same kind of a race against him the other day. Cut loose from the start, but mine died first. That kind of a race tells blood, breeding and bottom, provided the horses are in condition."

The Fire Boys.
The Gold Hill News is informed that "it is the intention of the Reno team, '48,' in the late tournament, to contend with the Yellow Jackets of Gold Hill for the second prize. The Reno team claims that their track was 'lapped.' The Liberty Hose Company deny that their team were the offenders—they were too far ahead."

A member of "48" informs the GAZETTE that his company has no intention of making any kick whatever. While there is a difference of opinion on the matter, only the best of feeling exists between the two companies.

Everybody Satisfied.
The bar at the track last week was well arranged and well managed. Everybody got the value of their money and went away satisfied. This was according to Becker's promise, and it is well known that his promises are reliable. His celebrated Pacific beer gave universal satisfaction.

Tuscarora Weather.
J. V. McCurdy, just in from Tuscarora, reports the snow as having been four inches deep on the adjacent hills, and the thermometer at four degrees below zero at Tuscarora on Saturday morning.

To the Unmarried.
W. E. Fricke is agent for the American Mutual Aid Association. Those contemplating matrimony ought to see him. Read his ad. in to-day's GAZETTE.

TO-DAY'S NEWS

Press Dispatches to the EVENING GAZETTE.

EASTERN.

Cabinet Prophecies.

CHICAGO, October 17.
A Times Washington special says: From an authority near the President it appears that the question of retaining James and McVeagh is decided adversely. Both these gentlemen were offered their places temporarily, but they thought best to decline any conditional appointment. Now that President Arthur has had it made clear to him that James and McVeagh will not remain conditionally, his Cabinet plans have become cleared. For the Secretary of State he has already selected ex-Senator Frank Johnson. For the Treasurer he has selected Judge Folger of New York, subject to James' consent. For Attorney-General he has been divided between two men, ex-Secretary Boutwell of Massachusetts and B.H. Brewster of Philadelphia, but the Attorney-Generalship may go to a third man, Phillips of North Carolina, present Solicitor-General. The Secretary of War is certain to be Robert T. Lincoln. The Secretary of Navy will probably be General Ned S. Beale, Grant's old Minister to Vienna. The Postmaster-Generalship has been partially promised to ex-Senator A. A. Sargent of California and a prominent Western ex-Senator, whose Cabinet aspirations have thus far been kept secret.

Guiteau's Hopes.

WASHINGTON, October 15.
Scoville, counsel for Guiteau, since coming to Washington has had as large a daily mail as the cabinet officers. He has not received a reply from General Butler, and therefore wrote again this evening. He expects to summon almost everyone who attended Garfield during his illness, especially Swain, Rockwell, and the surgeons. He thinks Butler will make it very warm for them, and that he will not neglect those responsible for the peculiar and illegal treatment of the prisoner.

"Is Guiteau confident of his acquittal?"
"He doesn't know," replied Mr. Scoville. "He is given credit for having more intelligence than he really has."

Colonel Corkhill does not think the danger to the prisoner from self-appointed avengers is over, and intends to take every precaution to prevent anyone shooting him while in the Court.

Scoville thinks that if Judge Cox lacks jurisdiction Judge Lynch will probably try the case.

Conkling's Visit to Arthur.

NEW YORK, October 16.
A Sun's Washington special says: It is reported here that the object of Conkling's visit to Washington was not to advise with the President respecting the formation of the Cabinet so much as to advise and beg him not to urge a certain man to become a member of it. That man was Roscoe Conkling. The story is that the President was anxious to have Conkling accept the Treasury, and Conkling, while not absolutely declining, advised the President that it would be far better for him to appoint some one else. Conkling expressed the most earnest desire for the success of the administration, and suggested that anything which appeared like a mistake must be avoided. The President was at last convinced by Conkling that it would be well to appoint some other man as Secretary of the Treasury. This explanation of Conkling's visit is believed by many to be correct.

The Jeannette Possibly Heard From.

LONDON, October 15.
A telegram from Professor Nordenskjold, Stockholm, dated last night, says: Captain Johannessen, commanding the Lena, Nordenskjold's Expedition, and who has just returned from Irkutsk, states that a jockey from a Buland village reports having seen a steamer at the mouth of the Lena on the 13th of September, new style, 1879. It was supposed to be the Jeannette. From the Yenisee comes reports that the Samojedes from the mouth of the Yenisee last winter found two corpses of Europeans and a barrel of whiskey. The information is remarkable, inasmuch as no European crew is known to have been lost there last year. The year mentioned is distinctly 1879.

St. Julien Wins Easily.

NEW YORK, October 15.
Probably the largest crowd that ever gathered at Fleetwood track assembled to-day to witness the great trotting event between St. Julien and Trinkett, for a purse of $50,000. After scoring twice the horses were sent off in the first heat, Trinkett leading, but before the quarter pole was reached St. Julien passed the mare, and kept the lead to the finish, Trinkett coming in on a run. Time; 2:14½. In the second heat St. Julien led throughout. Time, 2:16½. St. Julien won the third heat and race easily. Time, 2:16.

Roscoe Conkling Ill.

NEW YORK, October 17.
A special from Utica says Conkling, who has been unwell for some time, is reported unable to leave his room. The family physician has been frequently in attendance during the past few days and enjoined the strictest quiet. It was known several days ago that he had been in bad health for some time, but it was only within the last day or two that serious illness was apprehended.

Virginia Duellists.

RICHMOND, VA., October 16.
A hostile meeting took place this afternoon about ten miles from Richmond, between Captain H. H. Riddleberger, and Hon. G. D. Wise. Four rounds were fired without either being hurt. Mutual explanations and an amicable adjustment followed. Previous to the above meeting Captain Riddleberger and Richard P. Beine, editor of the State, met for the purpose of fighting a duel, but when all parties appeared on the ground selected it was found that no caps had been provided for the pistols, so Riddleberger rode away to meet Wise.

Blaine Hard at Work.

NEW YORK, October 16.
The Herald has the following: A close friend of Blaine's says that the Premier could not be induced to serve out his term under any circumstances. That it is his intention to be a candidate for the Presidency in 1884 is unquestionable. The publication recently of the latter which he wrote to Garfield accepting a place in his Cabinet was not accidental, it was really the first step in a canvass for the next nomination. Blaine within a few days has urged Arthur to take immediate action on his resignation.

Early is Too Old.

RICHMOND, VA., October 16.
General Mahone has written to General Early saying that the latter may proceed with his falsehoods and would be insults, so far as he (Mahone) is concerned.

Tyner Must Go.

NEW YORK, October 17.
A Tribune Washington special says: President Arthur has asked for the resignation of Assistant Postmaster-General Tyner.

FOREIGN.

An Uprising in Ireland.

DUBLIN, October 16.
Proclamations issued by the Government to forbid meetings of the Land Leagues were torn down by the people. The police and soldiery attempted to disperse a meeting here and a conflict ensued. The soldiers charged the mob several times. Several persons were wounded. Twenty arrests were made and many houses wrecked. The mob attacked many buildings of a public character, smashing windows, etc.

A Dublin correspondent thinks there is no danger of a popular uprising. The tradesmen closed their stores when Parnell was arrested. All Land Leagues guilty of intimidation are to be arrested, and orders to the soldiery and police have placed Ireland under military law.

Dillon has been rearrested. A general strike against rent is advocated, while Parnell remains in prison. There was another riotous gathering at the time of Dillon's arrest. Parnell has been charged with treason.

There are five thousand troops in Dublin. Large reinforcements of police and troops are going to Limerick.

How a Small Man Spoiled a Story and Caused a Large Man to Declare Himself.

They were all seated in the barroom chewing tobacco and spitting on a drab-colored stove. The long man in a red shirt had just told about shooting his dog "Jenny" while out hunting quail. Said he: "Ye never see a slut run so in all your days."

He was here interrupted by the small man with a green velvet vest.

"Say, Bill, be you from Texas or Tennessee?"

"An' when I found 'er she was a layin' in a spring with a quail in her—"

"Cause Sol 'n me's got a bet. Now where are you from, hey?"

The tall man glowered at the proprietor of the gaudy vest, for his unseemly interruption and said:

"You an' Sol be switched. I'll snoot ye both ef ye don't shet up. I wuz born an' ris on Raccoon ford, on the Possum Trot, which 'ow is about five bars up a dog from where the Possum Trot runs into Simmon's Creek, Lumpkin county, Georgia. You 'n Sol be dam."

Fifth Annual Anniversary.

On Wednesday last Bishop Whitaker's School for Girls celebrated its fifth anniversary. The young ladies were granted a holiday and repaired to the residence of B. F. Leete, where the day was given to merry-making and congratulations over the school's success. The School for Girls is now one of the foremost educational institutions of the interior basin, and the Gazette hopes it may celebrate many more birthdays in increasing influence and usefulness.

POLICE COURT.

Preliminary Examination of Parties Charged with Killing S. C. Scoville.

[SIXTH DAY.]

Sam. E. Hilliard sworn—Was employed to watch the office and safe and everything in it. Went to the office at 11 o'clock as a stockholder. I held 25 shares of stock. I was sitting in the front room on the table on the right hand as you go in. Fowler, Moore, Scoville, Balch and others went into the middle room. Mr. Fowler came to the door and said: "The meeting is called to order; rush in men and do your duty." He turned back into the room and I followed him in. He took hold of McMechan. I followed him in. He took hold of McMechan a minute later. He had a pistol in his hand as he was going across the room. I saw some one near the door fire a shot into the southwest corner, and perhaps two. McMechan stood in the southeast corner. I saw him fire a shot. I saw Balch scuffling with some one in the northwest corner. He had a chair striking some one. Saw McMechan striking some one with his pistol. I then went out of the door.

Saw Cogan in the outside room before a shot was fired. He was looking in through the door. He had a pistol in his hand. Did not see him come into the middle room. Before that he sat at a table in the outer room. When Moore came in he got up and spoke some words, beginning "these men." Moore said, "have you got their time?" Before that, when Cogan first came in at the front door, he asked the men if they had quit for dinner. They said they wouldn't work any more till they got their money. Cogan said "If I had known that, I wouldn't have brought you down." He said to Murphy, "The last time I brought you down you got drunk and made trouble." Murphy said, "I know I did." Cogan said he would go out and try to find Moore. He soon came back. Kendall came in and a man named McNally stuck his head in the window and said to Kendall, "Nate, they want you to have your men in front of the office at 10 o'clock. Saw only three pistols, Fowler's, Cogan's and McMechan's."

Cross-examined—Was once engineer on the locomotive. Mr. Balch discharged me on the twelfth of September. I was hired at the instance of Mr. Sunderland; took charge of the office on the order of Wheeler, Sunderland and McMechan about the fifteenth of September after the safe was opened; I was not in the office much; I had not paid any money for my stock; got it of Mr. Coffin; he said he made me a present of it. (The certificate was introduced in evidence. It was printed by Marshall Robinson, Carson, and reads: "60,000 shares, $1 each; Reno, Nevada, September 16th, 1891. Capital, $60,000; Nevada and Oregon Railroad Company. Incorporated April 25th, 1891, No. 11; assessable series. This certifies that S. E. Hilliard is the owner of twenty-five shares of the capital stock of the Nevada and Oregon Railroad Company of the par value of one hundred dollars each subject to the call of the Board of Directors of five per cent. per month of said par value, and transferable on the books of the Company, subject to the provisions of the by laws, by endorsement hereon and surrender of this certificate. T. Coffin, Secretary; E. D. Wheeler, President; 'sealed' Nevada and Oregon R. R. Co.")

I borrowed a pistol at Matt Parrott's the morning of the 27th and returned it after the affray. It was a self-cocker, dark-colored, and it was loaded. Borrowed one before, when I was put in charge of the safe. Borrowed one at the time of the big fire. Am in the habit of carrying a pistol, but it was in my house, over the river. Have not carried one for perhaps a year. As I went into the gunshop, I saw McMechan there. Parrott was working at his pistol. After he went out I asked Matt if he would lend me a pistol. When I came out of the gunshop I asked Sunderland if he had a pistol. He said no. I told him McMechan had one, and he had better get one. I went to Parrott's and got one for him. It was a dark one, like mine. Think they were Col's pistols. When I went into the middle room, I went from the desk in the southeast corner. Cogan left the desk I sat on before I did. He went over to Col. Moore.

Fowler, Balch and Scoville went into the middle room ahead of me. As soon as Fowler called I left the desk and went into the middle room. In going in I passed Cogan and Moore on my left. They had not moved. Instantly after I got into the room a shot was fired. I did not see it fired. The first shot I saw fired was the one near the door, by a short man, like Cogan. The next shot I saw fired was by McMechan. Did not see Cogan in the room at any time to recognize him. When I saw Fowler's pistol he was near the center of the room, either putting his pistol in or taking it out of his pocket. I saw it but an instant, but am sure it was a pistol. Do not think there was any shooting after I left. Have been asked a few questions by Mr. Dickinson, Sunderland and others. I told Mr. Bender about what I saw.

Never drew my pistol at all. I saw Wheeler and McMechan together in the gun shop; Wheeler said he had a pistol there. In answer to Webster: I don't like Mr. Moore; I am not stuck after Mr. Moore. I am after Sunderland.

Adjourned until 1 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Charles McNelly sworn—Used to live at Santa Cruz; came here with the engine; am fireman, called at the office about 12 m. Sep. 27th. The engine was up in the field when I got off her; Balch told me to tell Kendall to have his men on the train at 1 o'clock. The train was unloading ties in front of the office from C. P. cars. It stood sixty yards from the office. On cross-examination objection was made to the question by Webster: "Did you hear Hilliard say: 'H—I will pop at that meeting?' No answer made. Nathan B. Kendall sworn—went to the office at 12:15 to see Cogan. I heard that he had men to dig a ditch. Col. Moore asked me to see Evans about the nearest point to get water to the round house. I don't remember saying anything to Cogan about the ditch in the office; other things about the business of the road took our attention. Do not remember about his holding up a paper before me to read. Do not remember our conversation. Was not there five minutes. We had no conversation or writing about the meeting that day. I saw Cogan at Scoville's house a few minutes after the shooting. From there we came to the Justice court in Manning & Berry's wagon. From there we went to Manning & Berry's, then to Chamberlain's, then to the Western Hotel where he asked for some men and a team. I left him there; he went down and got dinner. Humphrey asked me where Cogan was; I told him I left him getting his dinner; I did not tell him he had gone out on the works; I did not say I could get him here in five minutes; Parker told me Cogan was going out to camp. Berry told me there was a warrant for Cogan, and that he had better give himself up. I took McFarlin's buckboard and started out to camp and met him coming in. I came with him to the Justice Court; that was after four o'clock. I have two pistols, one a derringer the other a Remington, with a heavy bore. It is a muzzle loader. I think there is several loads in it.

THE CATTLE MARKET.

Prospects of a Higher Market and Short Supply.

The price of cattle is rapidly advancing. The supply in Western Nevada and the northeast corner of California is very small. Nice three and four-year-olds that have been costing twenty and twenty-one dollars per head are now held for from twenty-six to thirty dollars. It is estimated that there is not a third the cattle in Nevada, Oregon, Idaho and Montana that there were five years ago. There are enormous crops of hay and grain in Surprise, Goose Lake and Sierra valleys, as well as on the Carson, Humboldt and Truckee, and there is a big demand for cattle to eat the crops up on account of there being no market for them. Most of the fat cattle on the ranges have been gathered in. In this valley, where, in former years, there were from ten to seventeen thousand head of cattle fed, there will be none this winter that have been heard of yet. Surprise valley usually winters over two thousand head. This season Dr. Patterson and Mr. Hudspeath are the only parties that have any engaged and the amount fed will not exceed a thousand. Cox & Jackson may feed some in Goose Lake valley, and about six hundred head will be fed in Paradise valley. None that the GAZETTE can learn of will be fed on the Humboldt. These figures are, of course, outside of stock cattle, calves and two-year-olds. They are all several dollars higher than they have been.

Personals.

N. L. Breed, Janesville, came in today on his way to tide water.

Clarence Dickey, wife and child, of Boston, arrived last night on the Pacific express train.

Dr. Patterson and Mr. Bonner started for their homes in Cedarville, Modoc county, on the stage this morning.

Rev. W. S. Herrington and family, of Rock River conference, will pass through Reno on the night train, for his new field of labor at Seattle, W. T.

Bad Road.

The road north to Pyramid is in a very bad shape. No work has been done on it under the present administration. The bridge over the Orr ditch is very bad. A horse is liable to go through it any night and then the county will have big damages to pay. Nothing tells against Reno worse than to have bad roads leading into it.

Thanks.

Mrs. J. Anchitz wishes the GAZETTE to return her thanks to all who so kindly assisted during her late husband's illness and since his death. Both Mrs. Long and Mrs. Anchitz feel very grateful.

Turkish Papers.

To kill newspapers do not get a great amount of news, and are compelled to throw away a part of what they do receive. The Legend Herald lately said, for example: "We are obliged regrettably to bury in the tomb of silence some interesting information received yesterday, together with a leading article connecting that information with the forecasts and comments which have lately appeared in our columns on the same subject."

The names of the White Star steamers all end in -ie, the last being the Arabic; and by they will get down to the Rheumatic, the Paralytic, and Catalectic.—Boston Commercial Bulletin. You didn't suggest the Seaside or the Piper Healdale.
